School Profile

[INSERT HOMESCHOOL NAME] is a private home school academy that seeks to train our students to become well-rounded world citizens and serious disciples of Christ combining academic rigor with practical life experience and service.

[INSERT HOMESCHOOL NAME] utilizes a wide variety of educational methods, including traditional textbooks, computer-based and live instruction. We leverage a variety of excellent private and public instructors, classes, and clubs. We review, correct, and grade student work and tests carefully and assign credits consistent with educational standards, using a 4.0 GPA scale. Additionally our students have been recognized for their character, social and communication skills, well-rounded experience and knowledge of the world, faith and humor.

Our educational objectives include giving our students exposure to a broad range of literary, historical, geographic, and cultural topics and experiences. We have capitalized on the flexibility that home education has afforded to integrate formal studies and field experiences, including travel-study to sites and locations around the US, and the world. We apply a 'worldview' approach, teaching our students to analyze, understand, and question a wide range of perspectives. We draw on many years of traveling, living, and working in over 24 different countries in our family's outreach to immigrants, refugees and international students which has expanded and enriched our children's cultural literacy and sense of place in the world.

Student Profile: [STUDENT NAME]

[STUDENT NAME] is a friendly, energetic, and independent learner with a voracious appetite for reading, and a great sense of humor. [STUDENT NAME] enjoys reading a wide range of literature, from Shakespeare to international news. He excels in literature, history, and the social and biological sciences. In 9th grade he won the award for U.S. History at the [CO-OP NAME]. Though math has not come as easily, each year he has applied himself and his hard work has paid off with significant success this year (evidenced in his ACT scores). We are confident in his ability to succeed in literary studies, the social and bio sciences, as well as, college level math.

In his freshman year [STUDENT NAME] was enrolled in [CO-OP NAME], which blends traditional and home schooling. [CO-OP NAME] supervised 80% of his courses, some taken on site and several taken from private instructors and at home. Course work and grades were reviewed by certified teachers/department heads (see [CO-OP NAME] transcript enclosed). This experience was good, but we realized that we could provide equal or higher quality instruction independently and have done so since.

[STUDENT NAME] interests extend beyond academics. He loves travel and interacting with people from different cultures and backgrounds. His creative skills include photography, videography and drawing. A skilled outdoorsman, he is an experienced backpacker, skier, hunter, and naturalist. Servant-leadership is a strong part of [STUDENT NAME] character and he serves in many different capacities at church, community, and public events. Currently he is serving as a teacher's assistant in his Shakespeare class. For two months last summer, [STUDENT NAME] lived and worked in Alaska in a commercial fishing camp. He established himself as a hard worker, and learned to live and work with people from many places and backgrounds. He demonstrated the skills and maturity to succeed as a part of a diverse team and overcome challenging situations.

[STUDENT NAME] will bring hard work, interest, fun, and character to whatever school he attends.

Sincerely,
